Harvard College Admissions & Financial Aid

Fact Sheet

Our Program at a Glance

Our long tradition of providing access to a Harvard education began with some of our earliest scholarship funds which were established in 1643. Today, alumni and other donors continue the tradition with generous contributions to the endowment and current use funds which allow us to maintain our long-standing and generous financial aid program. Guiding principles

- A lack of financial resources or need for financial aid are not impediments to your admission.
- Our aid is entirely need-based, and grant eligibility is determined in the same manner for all admitted students.
- Foreign students have the same access to financial aid funding as U.S. citizens.
- We meet your demonstrated financial need for all four years, based on information that we receive from your family each year. In awarding aid, we take into consideration your individual circumstances, the effectiveness of our aid program, the demand for aid from all students, and university resources.

Meeting the term-time work expectation

- You may meet the entire expectation by working 10 to 12 hours per week.
- You may choose to borrow up to the entire expectation through a student loan that is credited directly to your term-bill account.

Outside Awards

- Outside awards are used first to reduce or replace the term-time work portion of your award.
- Outside awards may also be used to replace your student summer earnings contribution, but not your parent contribution.

Other features

- You could be one of the 1,300 undergraduates who shared about $6 million in funding, coordinated by The Office of Undergraduate Research and Fellowships and over 40 other departments, to do research with faculty.
- At your family's request, we can re-evaluate our financial aid decision if your financial circumstances have changed.
- If you are receiving Harvard Scholarship support and are studying abroad for academic credit, you may apply your financial aid toward your study abroad costs.
